

BAKER STREET QUARTER

A WALKER'S GUIDE

Forget Sherlock Holmes for a moment, because the intimate streets leading off Baker Street have much more to offer. Here are two walking routes to introduce you to the best of Baker Street Quarter – one of London's most charming, characterful neighbourhoods.

BAKER STREET
TO SELFRIDGES

Stroll south from Baker Street tube station towards Oxford Street and first pass the London institution that is Everyman cinema, with its retro exterior, nostalgia-tinged auditorium and clever curation of art-house films. Pick up a bite from Reubens, which has been serving succulent salt beef sandwiches since 1973, before swinging left onto Dorset Street and then right onto Chiltern Street, where you'll find establishments such as Sunspel, Trunk Clothiers and Cire Trudon, the oldest candle maker in the world.

Manchester Square, one of the best collections of fine art in the country, where you'll see work by Titian, Rembrandt and Canaletto alongside armoury, antique furnishings and exquisite porcelain plates.

In need of a caffeine jolt? Stop at Souli on George Street, which serves wood-roasted Sant'Eustachio coffee from Rome, before continuing to the Wallace Collection on

HYDE PARK
TO REGENT'S PARK

Beginning your journey on the green fringes of Hyde Park, at the 19th-century London landmark of Marble Arch, wander north to New Quebec Street, where the ground floors of town houses are turned over to eateries and boutiques. The Grazing Goat pub, a Cubitt House venue, is a great place to stop for an impromptu lunch, or you can head on to the more formal Michelin-starred and family-run Locanda Locatelli, which you'll find in the Hyatt Regency London – The Churchill, at the western edge of Portman Square.

Crossing the northern side of the square you'll pass in front of Home House, built in the 18th century for the Countess of Home and now a private members' club. Continue up Baker Street, stopping at the Japanese Knife Company to admire its array of handmade culinary blades, before reaching Blandford Street. Then take a left onto Chiltern Street and indulge in an expertly crafted cocktail at André Balazs's

Chiltern Firehouse hotel, set in a former fire station. Chiltern Street is also home to a handful of decades-old, independently owned shops, including Howarth of London, which specialises in woodwind instruments and has been in business since 1948, and menswear store Grey Flannel, selling smart leather brogues, knitted ties and finely cut suits.

At the north end of village-like Chiltern Street you'll emerge onto the busy Marylebone Road, but keep walking – manicured Regent's Park is just steps away. Swing left over to Baker Street, or take a right, passing Madame Tussauds, then go left up York Gate. Both routes will lead to Outer Circle, the tree-lined ring road around the park, inside which you'll find 166 hectares of grass and gardens, originally appropriated as a hunting ground by King Henry VIII. Put paddle to water on the boating lake, or rise to the challenge of finding the St. John's Lodge secret garden – a peaceful, meditative park within a park.
